

This was just based off of my first initial site, I later fixed it to what the suggestions said.

Person #1:

I think your blog looks good! I think changing your initial title would benefit you though. By just having "Welcome!", it looks a little unprofessional. The body of text is your mission statement so I would just make it something else a little more suiting.

Person #2: (someone in the class)

- You need to fix some of the padding between the pages because it looks a little inconsistent when it gets scrolled down.
- Also don't forget the favicons.

Person #3:

Just reading through it, there are a couple little typos so I would just go through those and double check to make sure.

How I addressed the Issues:

First, I fixed the header of my home page to "The Vision" because I feel like that is more professional while keeping the integrity of my personality.

Second, I went back through to double check the padding, it was an issue in the media queries. I also put the favicons in the footer so that they would be accessible across all the pages.

Lastly, I just did a double check through to see my typos and there were two minor ones on the blog page that got fixed.
